

1. The pack

Courtiers, Cooks & Clockmakers is a set of four trails which will support your visit and help your students learn about some of the many colourful characters from the palace's past. Although known as Henry VIII's pleasure palace, Hampton Court has been enjoyed by many different monarchs during its 500 year history.

The pack consists of four trails. Each explores tales of men and women and their special relationships with the kings and queens of Hampton Court Palace.

The pack includes:

- A map
- A chronology of the palace's history
- 12 character cards
- Reflective questions to prompt discussion
- A quiz

This flexible pack can be used in different ways to suit your group's needs. Choose to follow one, some or all the trails, depending on the length of your visit.

2. How it works

Each trail has three stopping points and examines a different theme. You can use the pack in different ways, for example:

|--|----|---|
| <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Choose a theme2. Use the symbol and number on the card to find the stopping point on the map3. Follow the directions on the cards | or | <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Create your own route by choosing the characters that most interest you2. Use the map to find your route's stopping points3. Read the cards when you reach each location |
|--|----|---|

3. Using the pack with groups

The pack is designed to be shared and you will be given four packs for every ten students. Use the pack in any way that suits your group, but we recommend:

Before you enter

- Divide your whole group into four and explore all the trails
- Allow the students to vote on which trail to follow
- Assign different students to find the locations, read the stories and lead discussion

During your visit

- Remind your students to answer the quiz question at each stop - these are especially good for younger students
- Encourage your students to discuss the reflective question on each card

After you leave

- Give students the quiz answers
- Use the packs as prizes

Please remember that teachers must stay with their students at all times while visiting Hampton Court Palace.
